

Making the most out of your Sabbatical

Whether you stay in Los Angeles, spend time as a visiting scholar at another institution, or work in the field, your sabbatical is a valuable opportunity to give your research career the sustained attention it deserves. Often you can identify opportunities to collaborate or acquire new skills. If you plan far enough in advance, there may be multiple financial opportunities available to allow you to extend your sabbatical to the full year allowed.

Bring your lunch! —come and join experienced faculty colleagues in a discussion of how to best strategize your application. Learn how to make use of various fellowships and awards that can make your sabbatical the best experience possible for your career advancement.
